

A detailed oil painting of a leopard walking across a thick, gnarled tree branch. The leopard is the central focus, with its body angled towards the right. Its fur is a mix of tan, brown, and black, with distinct dark spots and rosettes. The leopard's head is lowered, and its eyes are focused on the ground. To the left of the leopard, a small, black and white striped animal, resembling a panda or a similar bear, is perched on the branch, looking towards the leopard. The background is a lush, green forest with soft, dappled light filtering through the trees. The overall style is realistic and detailed, characteristic of a fine art painting.
